I've been very busy since last week due to too much homework and midterm. And I didn't know how to balance my time to fit these works. And until last meeting of our team, I felt very overwhelmed.

During the meeting, after we talked about our project structure and some main functions of our quicksort game, I asked them that how they balance their works. And they told me that they also felt anxious about upcoming assignments, quiz and midterm. But as a student, these are what we have to do. Like an employee in a company, we must be responsive for our project.

After the discussion with them, I realized that what we need to do now is not being anxious, but be courageous to do those upcoming tasks. Usually I didn't want to make a schedule about my time, I was afraid that I would be upset if I was not able to finish it. But with courage, I made a schedule and stick to it. As a result, I have finished my part of the project and still have extra time to review the books, labs and books for the midterm in the next week.
